To Whom It May Concern:

Since 1999, Key Information Systems, Inc., has been a Premier Business Partner with IBM and systems integration company providing corporate solutions for companies throughout the US.

In 2001 I hired Rob Blaze in a staff associate marketing position to handle various marketing projects extended by IBM to Key Information Systems. Throughout his tenure at Key Rob exhibited the highest level of professionalism and talent I've known.

Rob was highly regarded and well liked by all the employees at Key Information Systems. His work with customers was greatly appreciated and he solidly gained a reputation at the company of someone who could "always get the job done". Whenever he worked with people on various projects he left a reputation of "bringing more the table", than was required.

He was always available; always extended himself to help others, no matter what the situation demanded. Rob found ways to contribute not only in our business environment, but was always great to be around, and positive daily force within the office environment. He's an outstanding individual.

As a marketing group Key gained a great reputation within the IBM organization. It was directly because of his fine talents and get ability with people that our reputation accelerated. In 2002 Key's Marketing Department were nationally recognized and by IBM and accepted the coveted Beacon Award for excellence. Rob Blaze's fine character and talents were a major reason why we at Key were so honored by IBM that year.

Beyond his excellence at the company I personally came to know Rob Blaze. My family will always welcome him to our house without invitation. Rob will always be loved by my family. He's an extension of who we are. I have had the great pleasure of knowing him; personally and professionally. I know no better person than Rob Blaze.

Sincerely

Peter V. Elliot
